The Firemen's Annual Ball on Friday night last was a most successful affair, and all who attended had a good time. The music was splendid and the floor in perfect shape. Messrs. Fullerton & Craigen provided the supper, which everyone enjoyed. Although the brigade are very little if any money ahead, the members are well satisfied, and look for better luck next time.

The Ladies Aid of the Olive Methodist Church purpose holding their annual supper and entertainment on Friday evening, November 11th. It is the intention to hold the supper in the parsonage now under construction, and the entertainment in the church adjoining. Admission to both 50 cents. Come along and see how the ladies will do the best they can for you.

The true philosophy of contentment is said to consist in reducing one's wants to a point below one's income. Nowadays it might be well to become a pedestrian, a vegetarian, an advocate of outdoor sleeping, an enemy of high temperature in the home and a confirmed wearer of last summer's clothes during the bracing winter months.

The Thanksgiving services in the Presbyterian Church last Sabbath were well attended. The subject in the morning was "Praise waiteth for Thee, O God, in Zion," and in the evening, "I was an hungry and ye gave me meat." The special music in the evening included two anthems by the choir, a solo by Mrs. Woodie, and a duet by Mr. and Mrs. Woodie.

Those from Lacombe who attended the Athletic Association Banquet at Bentley on Monday night, report a fine time. The crowd this year was not quite up to that of other years, but what was lacking in numbers was made up in enthusiasm. Interesting and instructive addresses were given in response to the various toasts, and were well received. The banquet part of the program was provided by J. P. McPherson, and he upheld his reputation as a caterer. The fact that so many events were on in Lacombe on Thanksgiving night accounts for the small attendance from this place.

A Red Deer paper makes the announcement that a "pauper from Lacombe" died at that place a day or two ago. We are not surprised that a party going to Red Deer to reside after living at Lacombe would die—in fact we would be surprised if he had lived. You need a patent constitution to be able to reconcile yourself to keep alive down there. We will bet that the "pauper" referred to in our contemporary had lots of money and a good constitution when he hit that burg. If after they had got his money from him he thought he was doomed to live there we do not blame him for passing in his checks. Red Deer strikes us as a pretty good town to die in.

The stars were glimmering overhead when the farmer rose from his downy bed; he yawned, as he rapped on the bedroom door: "Get up, boys, up! It is nearly four! When I was as young and as spry as you, I always got out of bed at two! Boys nowadays aren't worth a hang; I never saw such a lazy gang; it's four o'clock and you're still in bed, and the cows not milked and the hogs not fed! I reckon you'd sleep all day or more, if I didn't break down the bedroom door! Get up, get up! It will soon be dawn, and the best of the morning then is gone!" The boys obeyed him and quit their scores, and donned their reinnet and went outdoors. The farmer sat by the kitchen range, where his wife was working, and said: "It's strange, how the boys are crazy to quit the farm—the city life has a wondrous charm. They have lots to eat and a place to sleep, and they're always sure of their board and keep, and why they're anxious to quit the land, is something I cannot understand." The good wife said, in an undertone, as she placed in the skillet a piece of bone, and stuck her fork in some thingummyjigs: "It's maybe because they are not pigs."

Bailey's horse sale is on all the time at Lacombe.

Last Sunday evening a large crowd gathered in the Methodist Church to hear the first of a series of three sermons to be preached by Rev. Thos. Powell on the general subject of Christianity. The subject for Sunday evening was "Christianity, why consider it at all?" Mr. Powell gave a very practical address which was listened to with very great interest. Next Sunday evening the subject will be "What is the use of becoming a Christian." Come along. You will be made welcome. In the morning there will be the regular Children's Service which is held the first Sunday of each month.

BENTLEY

We notice that the Western Globe subscribers of this district are increasing in numbers rapidly, and we appreciate the Globe's deservicing of the patronage.

Maj. W. B. McPherson went to Edmonton on business Saturday.

The prospects of the district is being prepared by the committee for the English firm proposing to build our Lacombe and Bentley Railway.

Tim Sambrooks made a visit to Bentley on Sunday.

James McPherson and Guy Palmer wheeled out to the camp on Sunday.

The Pound Social, in aid of the new church, on Monday night last was quite a success, and an enjoyable time was had. After a short program of songs and recitations, the pound parcels were auctioned off by C. F. Dameron, and netted the sum of $12.65. A pound of butter was bid in by one of our merchants at 55 cents. Soap sold as high as 25 cents a bar, a pound of cats at 25 cents and other things too numerous to mention.

The Bad Boy is moving into his new barber shop today.

For the benefit of the readers, I have been asked to ask the Globe the following:

1. What constitutes a lawful fence?

2. Does any law compel a farmer to keep his cattle up off the range after Nov. 1st?

Answer to above questions:

1. A legal fence is any substantial fence not less than four feet high if it consists:

(a) Of rails or boards, not less than four inches, the lower one not more than eighteen inches from the ground and each panel not exceeding twelve feet in length.

(b) Of upright posts, boards or palings not more than six inches apart.

(c) Of barbed wire and a substantial top rail, the wires to be not less than two in number and the lower one not more than twenty inches from the ground, posts to be not more than sixteen and a half feet apart.

(d) Of three or more barbed wires, the lower one not more than twenty inches from the ground, posts to be not more than sixteen and a half feet apart.

(e) Of not less than 3 barbed wires on posts not more than 50 feet apart, the wires being fastened to droppers at intervals of not more than seven feet apart.

(f) Of two posts spiked together at the top and resting on the ground in the shape of an A, which shall be joined by a brace firmly nailed near the base, with three rails firmly secured on one side of the A, the top rail not less than four feet and the bottom rail not less than 18 inches from the ground, there being also firmly secured on the other side of the A one rail not less than twenty inches from the ground.

(g) Of woven wire secured to posts not more than 35 feet apart.

2. The law does not compel a farmer to keep his cattle up off the range after November 1st.

Thanksgiving Service.

The Harvest Thanksgiving Services at St. Cyprian's were well attended by earnest and appreciative congregations.

The special music was well rendered by a very efficient choir and the beautiful Harvest Hymns were heartily sung by the congregation. The evening service was perhaps the most popular of the four held on this day. "Come ye thankful people come" was the opening hymn and it was easy to feel that thankful people were there. Prayers, hymns, lessons and anthems all had special reference to the special object in view. The Rector preached at all services. In the morning "Roots and Fruit" was his subject, the necessity for balance in religion, the relationship between doctrine and life being emphasized.

In the evening the Blessedness of Drudgery was the theme: some of his points being,—the place of labor in the life of man and purpose of God; the conquest of the soil, the fulfillment of God's commission to man; effort an essential to success in physical and spiritual life etc. All these points were well illustrated and in closing we were reminded that the pierced hand is the hand of One who toiled.

LAKESIDE

A marriage interesting to Lakesiders occurred at Port Arthur, Ont. Oct. 10th, in which Mr. Charlie Boys, and Miss Looy Waldron, were the contracting parties. Both are well known here, and have many friends, if whose good wishes for them are even partly realized Mr. and Mrs. Boys will have a very happy future.

Miss Waldron was a great worker in the church and Sunday School, and will be greatly missed, socially too. They left Port Arthur by boat and rail for Fergus, and other eastern points, where they will spend the winter, returning in the spring to take up residence near Ponoka.

Mrs. G. A. Whitelaw left on Friday to visit friends in Aldridge and Calgary.

Miss G. Poole and G. Storey attended the Sunday School Convention at Calgary this week, being appointed delegates from the Sunday School here.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Wilson, of Pleasant Valley, were recent week end visitors at H. Langrock's.

School was closed this week on Thursday and Friday, the teacher's convention being in session at Lacombe.

Miss Edna Storey, who secured the silver medal for elocution at the W. C. T. U. contest some time ago recited pleasingly at the concert in the Methodist Church, Lacombe, Tuesday evening.

Every one was surprised to hear that a thief had entered the home of Mr. Vanbuskirk recently, and helped himself to some money.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Flewelling stopped off at Lacombe, and visited friends here too on their way through from the east to their home in B. C.

Go to the Lacombe Furniture Store for curtains, blinds, and table throws. We have a nice assortment to select from.

Clive is Progressing.

We took a run down to the thriving town of Clive last week, and it is surprising the changes that are taking place there. Clive boasts a branch of the Merchants' Bank, two large general stores, a hardware store, butcher shop, feed mill, blacksmith shop, shoe shop, tobaccoist shop, large billiard hall, a first class hotel and a creamery. There is now a temporary railway station and a resident agent and operator. In the spring a fine station building will be erected by the R. Co. There is also a large grain elevator, and it is being worked to its capacity handling the product of the great Pleasant Valley. Just now potatoes seem to be the live question at Clive, and during the past few days five carloads, have been shipped from that station to Calgary. Clive is also a heavy cattle shipping station, and seldom a day passes without seeing a fine bunch of fat cattle shipped out.

Brereton and Wilson, of the Pioneer Store are building a large and up-to-date store building on Main St., which they hope to occupy within the next month. The Methodist church has a parsonage under construction. The Anglicans of the district are building a new church, and have the foundation already in. There are also a number of other buildings under construction.

This year was a good one in the Valley, and the farmers are more than satisfied with the bountiful crops and the high prices they are realizing.

Go to the Lacombe Furniture Store for stoves and ranges. We handle the Guernsey-Oxford. There is none better.

A Record in External Trade.

Canada's external trade for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1910, amounts to $698,311,521, and, as might be supposed, this figure forms a record. The imports of merchandise amounted to $386,385,108, and the exports of merchandise to $298,768,993, and these figures in turn, are also records. The increase in the total over the previous year is $122,000,000, but over 1907-8 the increase is only $43,000,000, the financial crisis having had its greatest effect on last year's trade. Canada's imports and exports of merchandise for the past three years are as follows:

1907-8, exports $268,167,000; imports, $351,579,000; total $619,746,000.

1908-9, exports $269,321,000; imports, $358,217,000; total $627,538,000.

1909-10, exports, $298,768,993; imports, $386,385,000; total $685,154,000.

Almost the whole of the increase in the trade of the past year is shared by the United Kingdom and the United States. The increase with the former is $41,000,000 and with the latter $67,000,000, or an increased trade with these two countries of $108,000,000 out of a total increase of $122,000,000. Canada continues to buy an enormous quantity of merchandise from the United States, the figures for the past two years being $192,661,000 in 1908-9 and $239,071,000 in 1909-10. The increase in the imports from the United Kingdom is not quite as great, the corresponding totals being $70,556,000 and $95,065,000. Turning to Canada's exports to these two countries it is to be noted that both show much the same increase for the past year, over the figures for 1908-9. To the United Kingdom Canada exported in 1909-10 merchandise to the value of $183,744,000, the respective figures of Canadian exports to the United States being $110,514,000 and $92,604,000.

It is an interesting study to examine the character of the trade between Canada and her two chief customers, the United Kingdom and the United States. The figures for the past year are not yet available, but those for 1908-9 will be relatively much the same. In the case of the exports of the United Kingdom to Canada one finds that practically the whole consists of manufactured articles, or $60,000,000 out of $70,000,000. The exports of the United States to Canada are also largely manufactures, though the proportion is not so great. Out of a total export of $192,000,000 we find that $98,000,000 represent manufactures; minerals account for $82,000,000 and $14,000,000 come under the heads of agricultural produce, animals and animal products and fisheries.

Turning to Canada's exports to these two countries, those to the United Kingdom, as might be supposed, consist almost entirely of farm products. Agricultural produce is responsible for $68,000,000, animals and animal products for $42,000,000, the total falling under these two heads being $110,000,000 out of $183,000,000. To the United States Canada sends a large quantity of minerals, $31,000,000 out of $92,000,000 coming under this head. Products of the forest take second place with a total of $26,000,000, while agricultural produce, animals and animal products and fisheries are together responsible for $15,000,000.

Prairie and Forest Fires.

The Canadian Northern Railway is held responsible for the $5,000,000 damages caused by the recent forest fires in Minnesota and United States officials are taking steps to sue the Mackenzie and Mann corporation. It has been charged that the railway have been responsible for forest and prairie fires in Canada, but the companies have never been compelled to pay damages. Were they to be mulcted once or twice they would very soon take the precautions the law requires, but until they are, they will continue to destroy our forest wealth with calm indifference. But the railways are not the only offenders—surveyors, hunters and even settlers themselves have been known to have started forest and prairie fires, not deliberately, but through carelessness. In some instances, individuals have been fined for starting such fires, but it is impossible to collect damages. The financial loss is invariably greater than any one individual can make good and compared with it, the lines imposed have been hardly worth mentioning. The lines may teach people to exercise greater caution when kindling fires on the prairie or in the forest, but they do not seem to be sufficient punishment for the offence.

Canada and Conservation.

The address which Clifford Sifton made at the Empire Club, Toronto, is one of the clearest statements yet of the policy of conservation of the resources of the Dominion. His address has been described by a Toronto paper as an appeal for public against private interests, for a more productive agriculture and for better guardianship of the timber resources of the public.

He believes the farms of Canada produce only one-third of what they ought to yield. He would spend money liberally in order to engage experts and to induce the farmers to improve their methods. He deplores that we should be sending the trained men from our agricultural colleges to fill positions all over the continent when there is work for all of them at home that would yield an immense return to the country. He instanced Denmark and the Netherlands as examples of what could be done in Canada by advanced methods and generous expenditures. He insisted that housing accommodation for agricultural labor must be provided before we could hope to secure an adequate supply, and condemned the conditions under which farm laborers are forced to live.

He laid particular emphasis on the need for a more thoroughly organized system of protection against forest fires. He would hold the railways to account for the fires for which they are responsible, and improve and extend the systems of protection and prevention established by the provinces. He said that in twenty-five or thirty years the timber of the United States will be exhausted, and hinted that we cannot afford to ignore the fact when we come to consider reciprocity. His clear view is that we should prevent export of timber from the country.

He would give only short term water-power franchises and have rates under absolute public control. He spoke in strong approval of the power policy of the Ontario Government to which the Conservation Commission has been anxious to lend its support. He pointed out that many bad bills to establish private interest in water-powers were presented at the last session of the Federal Parliament notably that to divert power from the St. Lawrence River at Cornwall to the United States suggested that much of this questionable legislation would probably appear at the coming session, and declared that the Commission needed the assistance of the press and the public to defeat schemes of private monopoly.

He protested against the pollution of rivers and streams by sewage, advocated national measures to assist the provinces in protecting the health of the people, and suggested public reserves in the north country where victims of tuberculosis could live under the best conditions. Throughout he urged particularly the importance of the agricultural interest and the immense value to any country of a contented and prosperous rural population. He illustrated his argument by instructive facts from the experience of other nations, and altogether revealed a wide field of service for the Commission, for the Legislatures and for Parliament. Those who heard the address could not but feel that new questions were coming upon the country and perhaps that in comparison, many of the issues of recent years were trivial and commonplace.

Now that the municipal elections are at hand it is a good plan to study the candidate. If he happens to be a present bearer of civic honors look up his record; trace his movements in the council. Should his record as a public man prove him a man of judgment efficiency and business ability by all means vote for him, regardless of private or personal dislike. On the other hand if a candidate is a political novice study his private life and personal character. Is he sincere? Is he a strong man, strong enough to stand by his convictions even though in the minority. Has he been successful in business? These are important questions. The time is rapidly passing when men are boosted into office because of personal popularity. Use the same judgement in selecting a public servant as you would in choosing a personal one and by this means the people will select only men of the right caliber. Party politics should not intrude when it comes to municipal affairs. Pick the best man, and may he, with your help—win.

Thinking of Building a Silo ? Better Build it of Concrete

THE construction of a silo affords an excellent example of what the farmer can do with concrete—and of the superiority of concrete over all other material for various structural work about the farm.

The usual wooden silo, besides being expensive, is far from satisfactory. In the first place, it does not endure; and, more important still—being far from weather-proof—its contents become water-logged—producing an unsanitary condition.

A silo built of concrete, on the other hand, is practically everlasting—it is proof against heat, cold and moisture—and it has the merit of comparative economy.

This economy feature is further explained in our free book—"What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete"—which tells how to mix and use concrete for the making of silos and other buildings on the farm.

The United States Elections

Next week there will be through-out the United States the equivalent to a Dominion general election in this country. There will be more than that. For not only will a new House of Representatives be elected at Washington—corresponding to our Dominion House of Commons—be elected, but there will also be general State elections in a number of States, the results of which will affect the political complexion of the United States Senate. Thirty-one of the total number of ninety-two members of which chamber are on the eve of retirement, through expiry of their terms. These vacancies in the upper chamber at Washington will be filled by Senators elected by State Legislatures to be elected next week, and it is regarded as not at all impossible that the result may place the insurgent Republicans and Democratic Senators in the majority.

The prospects for Democratic success in the country at large do not appear to have been radically altered by anything that has occurred since the State elections a few weeks ago in Maine, which for decades has been a Republican stronghold, and resulted in an striking victory for the Democrats. The campaign which Mr. Roosevelt is making at the head of the Republican forces in New York State seems, from all accounts, to be falling short of the whirlwind effectiveness of all his previous campaigning. He is on the defensive in regard to his attacks on the Supreme Court, and his attitude in regard to the tariff is not one that even his most enthusiastic admirers have had the courage to praise. Outside New York the Republican campaign has been damaged by what the Democrats are pointing to as Mr. Roosevelt's "straddling." As an instance of what is meant, in addition to the tariff contrast between Mr. Roosevelt's Western utterances and the New York Republican platform, may be noted the fact that Mr. Roosevelt recently went into Indiana and enthusiastically commended Senator Beveridge, an insurgent leader, who has fought the tariff administration at Washington, and almost immediately afterwards went into Massachusetts and endorsed with no less enthusiasm Senator Lodge, a Standard-bearer leader, whose course has been one of unwavering support of the tariff administration.

The States of New York, Connecticut, New Jersey and Indiana form the centre of the line of battle, and if they should be carried by the Democrats, it will mean the nearest approach to a political revolution in the United States since the great Democratic collapse in 1894. Mr. Roosevelt's main effort is to save New York from the possible Republican wreck. New York is, as one of the New York papers has put it, the "Bloody Angel" of this campaign. The intense interest which this fact arouses is due to the feeling that, if the ex-President can save New York for the Republicans while neighboring States are captured by the Democrats, his own national leadership and influence will be increased to something unprecedented even in his own "unprecedented career."

Federal Representation

While Western Canada is vitally interested in the next census, it is not awaiting with anxiety the announcement of the enumerators' figures as are the Maritime Provinces. These provinces are uneasy because they are facing a decrease in their representation in the federal parliament while the Western provinces are elated because they are certain that their representation will be increased. The Maritime Provinces have submitted to the other provinces a proposal that would, if acted on, restore them to a happy frame of mind. It is that the British North America Act be so amended that the minimum representation of the Maritime Provinces will not be less than that which they were given when they entered confederation. These provinces have tackled the problem in a variety of ways, and this is the only solution from which they can derive satisfaction. In the earlier stages of the discussion, the other provinces suggested that the Maritime Provinces embark on publicity campaigns with a view to attracting new settlers, but this suggestion was regarded as bordering on the frivolous. It was then suggested that the Maritime Provinces amalgamate and "pool" their representation, but this suggestion was also discarded. There was left only one method by which the Maritime Provinces could attain the desired end and that was the securing of an amendment to the British North America Act, by which their minimum representation would be fixed. It remains now for the other provinces to consider this proposal. The plan does not seem feasible, for in the light of solid reason, the principle embodied in it is not sound. The other provinces would be setting unfairly toward themselves were they to approve the granting of representation in the federal chamber on any other basis than a fixed ratio of population. Were this concession to the Maritime Provinces made, a precedent would be established that would work for discord in years to come and, in any event, the provinces that were disinclined against would have grounds for objection. They would not consider it proper that a member representing, say 30,000 people in the Maritime Provinces, should have the same voice in the affairs of the Dominion as a member representing 40,000 people in the west. The west can sympathize with the seaboard provinces in their dilemma but it cannot jeopardize its future interests by approving the proposed amendment to the B.N.A. act.

A study of the representation of the various provinces since they entered confederation will make it plain why the Maritime Provinces are uneasy. In the first commonsense (1867), Nova Scotia had 19 members and New Brunswick 15. In the second parliament, (1872), Nova Scotia had 21 members and New Brunswick 16. In the third parliament (1874), Nova Scotia had 21, and New Brunswick 16. In the fourth parliament their representation remained the same and Prince Edward Island, (just admitted), had 6 members. There was no change in the Maritime Provinces' representation until the eighth parliament, (1896), in which Nova Scotia had 20 members, New Brunswick 14, and Prince Edward Island 5. In the ninth parliament, (1900), their representation was further reduced, Nova Scotia having 18, New Brunswick 13, and Prince Edward Island 4. Since 1900, the figures have not been changed, but they will be changed, and that in the nature of another reduction by the next census. It will be noticed that Nova Scotia's representation was once 21 and is now 18, that New Brunswick's was once 16 and is now 13, and that P. E. I.'s was once 6 and is now 4. No wonder the prospect of further reductions alarms these provinces. On the other hand Ontario is holding her own with Quebec, in the matter of increase in population and the western provinces are growing so fast that their representation will be greatly augmented.—Ez.

Two Wheat Crops a Year.

That electrified crops might in a less conventional sense of the word mean an electrified agriculture has been evident since Sir Oliver Lodge's extraordinary experiments, which were referred to some months ago in The Herald. Divested of all the difficulties of scientific terminology, the experiments were directed to the possibility of ripening wheat by the aid of electricity, in countries where sunlight is often conspicuous by its absence. To this end a series of experiments were conducted under Sir Oliver's guidance, and it was shown possible that wheat which was sown in June was ready for the reaper on Oct. 10. The period of growth was, therefore, only 82 days. In Canada wheat sown as late as May 7 has been out on August 14, a period of 97 days. Probably in the north, with longer hours of sunlight, the maturing period is shorter. The best time in England for ripening wheat is about 106 days. And Canada has nearly twice as much sunshine as England during the period of development. The weak point in these experiments so far is the English May for sowing and fertilizing. These experiments being conducted by a man of science—a profession which invites publicity, it lays down as an axiom that these effects can be reproduced.

Should they receive endorsement from independent investigators and the effects, under equally favorable circumstances, be repeated, 15 to 20 per cent. in the possibilities of early maturity of the wheat plant will be gained. But until experiments have shown that the crop will flower and achieve self-fertilization in an English May and has been reaped in mid-June, there will be no possibility of saying that England will be able to reap two wheat crops within a year.

Cost of Hudson Bay Road.

On September 1, 1908, provision was made by the department of the interior for pre-emption in addition to homesteading. From that date up to August 1 of this year, a period just one month less than two years, the receipts from these sources amounted to $21,000,000. This of course does not refer to the interest already accruing. No estimate is made of the receipts from the same source in time to come.

The Winnipeg Free Press calls attention to these facts to strengthen the faith in the timid souls who are alarmed about the proposed cost of the Hudson Bay railway. The Free Press quotes the speech of the minister of the interior who is introducing the clause referring to pre-emption said:—

"I am insisting on the pre-emption provision, as a means of ensuring the early building of the railway to Hudson Bay." And again, in the same debate: "We believed that by that provision we would be enabled to raise a fund that would meet the responsibility to be undertaken because of the railway to Hudson Bay."

And there is enough money in sight at the present time to finance the road. The timid Easterner should not show any undue alarm because from the West comes the money necessary for the building of the road.

And the Free Press ends its consideration with the following very sensible conclusion:—

"As the West is to pay for the road it holds not unreasonably, that it should be consulted in the building." It does not want its millions given to a corporation as a bonus for building a road which will then become its property. It does not want its millions given to a corporation as a bonus for building a road which will then become its property. It desires a railway, built by public funds, which will remain in perpetuity a publicly-owned highway to the Northern sea."

"I do not believe there is any other medicine so good for whooping cough as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," writes Mrs. Francis Turpin, Junction City Ore. This remedy is also unsurpassed for colds and croup. For sale by Dealers everywhere.

The local optimists of the city of Regina, in their zeal to carry the highway there on December 12, in the purchase of the King's Hotel, (the leading hotel of that city) have made one of the shrewdest moves which has been credited to any similar organization in any part of the country up to date, and one which will without doubt win them a lot of support in Regina, as well as have an important bearing upon the result in other parts of the province. One of the chief arguments against the prohibition forces in the past was that their leaders were mere theorists, most impracticable, and therefore became too zealous advocates of conditions which were well-nigh impossible. Now that the advocates of municipal prohibition have shown that they are willing to back up their convictions by something more substantial than mere opinions and harrowing accounts of the ravages of the liquor traffic, we have not the least doubt that endorsement will be gained from quarters which stood aloof in the past.

"I am pleased to recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as the best thing I know of and safest remedy for coughs, colds and bronchial trouble," writes Mrs. L. B. Arnold of Denver, Colo. "We have used it repeatedly and it has never failed to give relief." For sale by Dealers everywhere.

THE BOY.

A writer in a contemporary is a talk on boys—their surroundings, habits, and results generally—has the following to say, which is worthy of consideration by parents and guardians. The worst habit that boys can fall into is that of loafing around on the streets at night. It is then they cast their lot in slippery places when at any moment they are likely to fall from grace. All good and noble lessons taught them by their mothers are counteracted and nullified. They learn nothing that is good—but everything bad. The boys who spend their nights in the sacred precincts of home, with good books for companions are the future hope of this country; they will fill our legislatures and congressional halls, and sit in judgment upon men and measures, while the boys who run the streets will fill our penitentiaries, almshouses and lunatic asylums. Parents who are responsible for these broken laws of decency will have broken heads and bowed down heads in the awakening years that will inevitably follow.

Death of Croft Broughton.

Red Deer News: On Sunday afternoon Croft Broughton, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Broughton, passed away after a long and painful illness, patiently borne. Born at Great Grimsby, England, passing his early youth there, and being educated at the Municipal College and technical schools of that seaport. Coming to Red Deer four years ago, he engaged in business with his father, becoming a careful, capable and proficient machinist.

He was of a quiet and unassuming disposition and more considerate of others than himself. Love of law and order and respect towards his elders, combined with deep religious convictions, endeared him to his family and personal friends.

The funeral took place yesterday at the Red Deer cemetery, Rev. Mr. Tynor conducting the service. Mr. and Mrs. Broughton have the sympathy of the community in their loss and bereavement.

Good Roads.

The importance of the good roads idea is not sufficiently impressed upon the public at large and it is in order that the organized movement keep the question to the fore. Greater losses to farmers come in settled countries because of neglected roadways than are sustained from excessive freight rates on railways; yet all the attention appears to centre on the railway and its charges. Now that the automobile is becoming such an important factor from a transportation standpoint the good roads movement will no doubt be given an impetus. Auto owners are taxed by the provincial government and this money should be devoted annually to improving the main highways of the province. Practical co-operation between the government, the municipalities and auto organizations would in a very few years convert Alberta into an ideal good roads province and the efforts of the provincial convention would be well directed were they exerted along lines to bring this about.

A Great English King.

The late Edward the Seventh is not yet what you would call legitimate history, so we will bar him. Now, tell me who was the greatest king of England since—
"Britain first at Heaven's command Arose from out the azure main?"
History has not done him justice—history, in fact has done him a great injustice.
Men have tried to rehabilitate Judas Iscariot and made out a good case for that unhappy Jew, but a far better case could be made out for the greatest King that England ever had—the late Richard the Third, Duke of Gloucester.
He was the greatest, the most important of English patriots. When he grew to manhood, what did he see around him? Civil war raging in every direction. And about what? About a few three-for-a-quarter princes, fighting for the crown. The whole land was deluged in blood, and torn with intestine strife, and it looked as If the war would continue till the crash of doom, or while the supply of princes held out. So my brave Dick determined to come to the rescue of his beloved England—England that he loved so much better than any of his uncles and cousins. His plan was the only one which was really workable. And he seemed to have been born to work it.

When children are fighting about a doll or a tin soldier, or a drum, the wisest plan is to take the bone of contention away from them, and, if you wish to teach them a lasting lesson, throw it into the fire. Richard concluded that as the fighting was all about the princes, removing the princes would be a good scheme, and he straightway proceeded to do it, and as a starter he informed the company at tea that the sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom.

Much has been said about the villainy of the killing of the little princes, but in the light of these events it looks uncommonly like statesmanship. When they grew up they would have made trouble and surely the two little lives were of less account than the peace and content of all England.

Even as a Zulu assegai in far away Natal saved France from another Napoleonic attempt, just so did the fact that the sons of Edward slept in Abraham's bosom insure a peaceful rest to the whole kingdom in years to come.

The tears and bloodshed that petty pretensions have caused in almost every civilized land on earth cannot be measured; and look out for Spain and Portugal; they will have their share of unnecessary suffering.

Richard the Third was a great Englishman, and a splendid, though a somewhat sanguinary, patriot. Like the patriot Cromwell, who has somewhat resembles him, he cleaned out the whole menagerie and put the key in his pocket. These two men saved England each time. And both of them are reviled today, but it is my humble opinion that Britain never raised two greater men these two.

—The Khan, in Toronto Star.

Summer's half a mile behind us. How it used to jar and grind us, when we sweltered in the heat waves, saying things about the flies. How we groaned and sighed and blustered when the sun, as hot as mustard, gave a daily demonstration in the good old smoking skies! O the summer has skeddaddled! Down the river it has paddled to the grim and ghostly ocean where the wraiths of summers be; and the Autumn, rich and rosy, soon will follow suit and mosey, to the resting of the seasons in that moist and misty sea. Thus the seasons come and go, us, flit an hour and then slip by us, and we're always growing older, always nearer to the end; and it's better for us to rustle, like the seasons, as they hustle, than to stand and cuss the weather as we're apt to do, my friend. Till the old world falls asunder summers will be hot as thunder, and we cannot make them cooler by a lot of grunts and groans; while the old world holds together there'll be cold and stormy weather, and a lot of frantic snorting will not warm our anointed bones. Let us quit this thing of grunting; let us drape ourselves with bunting, shoot a lot of giant crackers and proclaim that all is good! In the winter, in the summer, let our record be a hummer! Let us pump our share of water—let us saw our pile of wood!—Walt Mason.

Coal beds under the sea, along the Firth of Forth, Scotland, which have not been worked for 288 years, are soon to be operated by a company which is sinking shafts at Valleyfield near Dunfermline, according to a report to this government by Consul Howard D. Van Sant of Dunfermline. The first project for draining coal pits, together with the sinking of a coal pit under water, was made there in 1590. In 1625, a storm destroyed the moat from which the coal was taken and the coal beds have remained idle ever since, though repeated attempts have been made to work them. The company which proposes to operate them is building a miners settlement at Valleyfield for four or five thousand inhabitants. An interesting experiment in housing the miners is to be made. A dozen houses near the water are each to be provided with bathrooms for the miners. The workers are urged to have two suits of clothes, one for use underground and the other for wearing to and from the colliery and to avail themselves of the baths daily immediately upon ascending from the mine. At the company's office, the counsel learned that only about one in five of the miners will avail themselves of these privileges, although the cost to each miner would not be more than $10 a year.

There is little danger from a cold or from an attack of the grip except when followed by pneumonia, and this never happens when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. This remedy has won its great reputation and extensive sale by its remarkable cures of colds and grip and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. For sale by Dealers everywhere.

John Burns, ex-workman, and now one of his Britannic Majesty's Cabinet Ministers, can afford to smile at those who are always throwing it in his teeth that he once said "No man is worth more than $2,500 a year." Honest John's department, the Local Government Board, has been raised, along with the Board of Trade to the rank of a first class state department, and accordingly the salaries of the heads have been raised by Parliamentary resolution from $10,000 to $25,000 a year. This is not bad for a man who according to his statement in "Who's Who" is "still learning and still struggling." His former Socialist friends have shaken him off, but with their exception the country approves the Prime Minister's praise of his colleague for "the assiduity and single mindedness with which Mr. Burns has administered his department." Mr. Burns has an effective way of silencing his Socialist critics. He intends to devote his increase of $15,000 to social projects in which he is interested. Certainly he has not altered his plain way of living. His modest house in the far from aristocratic district of Battersea still suits him. He hates any sort of show, and his wife would not be happy without her housework. She keeps no servants but a day girl and an occasional scrub woman.—Exchange.

Prof. Steida of Koenigsberg, Germany has upset another popular belief by declaring that a sudden shock or fright cannot turn hair white. He says that all the supposed cases of sudden blanching of the hair are either instances of deception or of incorrect observation. Prof. Steida gives several instances in point, among them the historical example of Marie Antoinette, whose hair is said to have turned grey the night before her execution, the fact being that she had been grey-haired for some time previously. He also mentions the case of a medical practitioner with dark hair in Berlin who went into a hospital to undergo an operation. On leaving he was much commiserated by many people owing to the fact that his hair was snow white. The truth, however, was that he was not able to dye his hair, as he had previously done daily.

Hospital Donations.

E. L. Berrey, $200; A Friend, bag of potatoes.
The Hospital will be in need of a few light comforts for the coming cold weather. We cannot afford to buy all blankets. A light comfort for a single bed don't take very much. If someone would send me a small bunch of wool I could get some manufactured. Anyone who has a grey blanket to spare it would be all right. Things don't necessarily require to be new sometimes people have things half worn that they get tired of. So long as they are clean they will answer just the same.—Mrs. Wm. Burrie.

This Feeding Floor Could Be Built in The Fall and it would help greatly to preserve the condition of your live stock in the Spring.

Every farmer knows that in the Spring of the year his barnyard is almost bottomless. The live stock mire down into the mud and almost food around—greatly to the detriment of their physical condition.
By building a Concrete feeding floor in the yard, this trouble is done away with.
A Feeding Floor of comparatively small area and built this Fall, would pay for itself next year. Concrete is the only material that can be used in this way at a moderate cost.
Will you ask for your copy of the book which we have prepared for you—"What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete"? It's free—and, take our word for it, you'll find it one of the most interesting pieces of such literature you ever read. And profitable, too—because it will save you money.

These dishes are so much superior to the common dishes that it will please you to see them, to have them and to use them. The glaze is a rich pure white, and the shapes new, and, in a way, they are as nice as the best china. for the winter outfit has many advantages. One gets a better selection when the stocks are new and complete, and one will have the goods when they need them, and few things pay better than being ahead of winter in this climate. These considerations are specially applicable to Furs and Clothing.

The pleasure of giving satisfactory service to our customers is more to us than the profit incidental to our dealings, and if sometimes we fall short of the service we try to give, we value a chance to make up the shortcoming.

A VERY SUCCESSFUL CONVENTION.

The Lacombe Teachers Association held their Seventh Annual Convention in Lacombe on Thursday and Friday last. In point of numbers, enthusiasm and profit it was the best yet held in this insipidate, seventy-four teachers signing the roll.

The meeting was called to order at 11 a.m. As president are now in the inspectorate, a temporary chairman was elected, which honor went to Chas. E. Bowker, of Bentley.

The first paper was one on "The Playground Movement," by Inspector Thibodeau. He pointed out how the leading educators are all advocating larger playgrounds. Last year the city of Winnipeg voted $5,000 to further the movement. The Edmonton school board are securing about four acres for all their new school grounds. The chief function of the teacher is to build up character. How much character are we developing by merely making a child sit quiet during study hours. The playground can be made a great factor in foreign schools by the teacher getting out at recesses and playing with or supervising the pupils during their games, to see that they talk English. Our language is an easy one to learn to speak, but hard to learn to write on account of its anomalies in spelling. We have done a good work towards assimilating these foreigners and unifying our people if we get them to that stage in which the first word which comes to them in a moment of excitement is an English word.

The first prize in the joke competition went to Miss Jones, of Eureka S. D., a teacher recently from Wales.

The afternoon session opened with a cheering address by Superintendent McCaig, of Edmonton, on "The Status of the Teacher." By an historical review he showed how the social status of the teacher had improved. In ancient Greece, from which we got the word Pedagogue, the teacher was a slave. The greatest teacher the world ever saw, Pestalozzi taught for $1.00 a day while the Chief of Police in the same town got $150. In the early years in Canada the teacher was generally a broken down soldier. Dr. Sharpe remarked that "the best teacher was the cheapest."

"The Moral Training of Children," was led by Dr. Sharpe, who took the definition side, and whose paper is published elsewhere in this issue.

Rev. T. Powell continued the discussion. He would not enter a plea for a state religion or catechism, but for the recognition of God in our schools. Education should train for complete living, physical, mental and moral. It is the science of human nature and the art of developing it. What we want in the nation we must put into the schools. The teacher is the interpreter of all the child learns. The ultimate aim in character development is to live righteously, healthily and happily. Nothing better written than "Gulick Hygiene Series." (This series is now placed in the Department catalogue for school libraries.) Clivice taught the right adjustment of every relation in life. Mathematics stood for exactness. History and literature opened a magnificent field. We ask "how is the boy getting along in his studies?" We should also ask "how is the boy getting along on the playground?" For that is how he will play the game of life.

Chas. E. Bowker, teacher of Outlook S. D., took up the ways in which pupils may be taught direct moral lessons. He illustrated this from the motto "A good word is as soon spoken as an ill one." Get children to tell stories to illustrate the motto. The chief reason for doing wrong is the child gets no sympathy in doing right.

Inspector Boyce mentioned the silent moral influences, as a clean school, etc.

Superintendent McCaig brought out the point that while there was no specific moral training in the public schools, all our training was moral. The persuasive, diffused, indelible teachings of Christianity were felt in our whole lives.

Baseball, Football, Basketball. W. A. Saunders in a thoughtful essay, interspersed with caustic humor, defended baseball. It trained a man to self reliance. The better faced alone nine men, his supporters could not, if they wished, aid him. A player must be daring but not fool-hardy. If he was out by a foot that meant he must time himself to the one-thirtieth of a second. The game was good exercise but not too strenuous. It trained the boy in perseverance, modesty, endurance.

Geo. Marion upheld the merits of football. It especially needed head work for team play. It required pluck, endurance, self-control and a good physique. One boy had not a chance to star simply because he had a good arm.

When Miss Jessie Glass had finished her paper in favor of basketball a prominent educator present remarked, "the nearest little thing I have ever heard." Miss Glass having captained the team which won the tournament in Strathcona two years ago, in which teams from Lamont, Fort Saskatchewan, Edmonton, Strathcona, Wetaskiwin, and Lacombe, competed, knows the game from A to Z and in her paper treated it from the physical, mental and moral viewpoints. It was best adapted to rural schools, trained all the muscles, barred all roughness, improved the general health and carriage, required less force but more thought than other games; it trained one to take defeat gracefully, and win with modesty, to not question the decision of the referee "even when you know he is wrong."

Thursday evening after attending the play, "A Bachelor's Honymoon," the Lacombe Staff tendered the visiting teachers a reception in the basement of the Presbyterian church. Dr. Sharpe presided at this very pleasant function. Mr. McCaig gave an address, after which cake and coffee were served.

Friday Forenoon.

Miss E. M. Burnett, of the Normal School staff opened the morning session with a very instructive talk on Primary Reading. The large attendance was chiefly due to this paper, and the teacher's felt well repaid for their trip. Miss Burnett favors starting to teach reading by the word or sentence method, after some twenty to one hundred words are taught, then taking up phrases, after that continuing all three methods.

The pupils should be taught from the blackboard from six weeks to three months, before a primer is put into their hands to read. She gave a most interesting pen picture of a New York school.

History.

Miss Olive C. Ringwall, the teacher of Mary's Villa school, near Meeting Creek, the school which made one hundred per cent for the whole of last term, gave a most practical paper on the teaching of History to standards II and III. The paper was followed by a splendid discussion. Inspector Thibodeau states that Miss Ringwall gets the best results in Standard III history of any of his rural teachers.

The afternoon session was taken up with a paper on writing, muscular movement, by Mr. W. J. Baycroft, and general business. Mr. Baycroft entered his school in the penmanship course of the Alberta College, and in six months with three lessons a week of about twenty minutes each, brought his pupils to such efficiency that one took second prize for the province. A boy of four successfully followed the exercises.

Business Meeting.

The teachers expressed a desire to have the following subjects taken up at the next convention: simplified spelling, physiology, nature study, arithmetic, geography.

Mr. N. E. Carruthers was elected a representative to the Provincial Teacher's Association.

The following are the officers for the ensuing year:

Hon. Pres. Dr. E. M. Sharpe
President Chas. A. Bowker
Vice Pres. Miss M. Clark
Sec. Treas. Miss Darby
Resolution and Finance Committee, Messrs. Marion, Layton and Gilbert.

FARMER GAINS A VICTORY

Neils, of Lamerton, Wins Case Against Machine Co.

At Edmonton last week, the jury in the case of Neils vs. The Port Huron Co., an action for recovery of damages for breach of warranty, which occupied the attention of the Supreme Court for four days, brought in a verdict for the plaintiff.

The circumstances of the case were as follows:

Neils, a farmer, who has resided in the neighborhood of Lamerton during the past twenty years purchased in August 1906, from Chapin & Co., of Calgary, agents for the Canadian Port Huron Implement Co., a thirty-two horse power traction engine and a large 40 by 60 separator with various attachments, at an approximate cost of $6,000. The company appointed him their local agent and in consideration gave him a rebate of twenty-two per cent, reducing the price to $4,600, represented by a number of promissory notes, extending over a long period.

In 1908 the company sued Neils for the price of the machinery and recovered payment.

Neils, in this action, sued for $6,000 for breach of warranty, alleging serious defects in the engine and in the separator. He claimed that the separator did not properly separate the grain from the chaff and also alleged a number of defects of various kinds in the engine.

The company denied most of these claims and asserted that in any event he entered into an agreement with the company in which all the warranties made by the company are set out in the form of an agreement which he signed.

In charging the jury Justice Scott characterized the terms of the agreement to which the subscription of the plaintiff was required by the defendant company as harsh and unreasonable.

The jury placed the loss suffered by the plaintiff at $2,400, and in addition found that the machine was practically worthless, and that, therefore, the plaintiff should recover the cost amounting to $4,600.
